Logan is a student-at-law in the McLennan Ross Calgary office.

Prior to completing his Juris Doctor the University of Calgary in 2020, Logan earned a Bachelor of Arts in Political Studies from the University of Saskatchewan, graduating with Honours.

During law school, Logan worked with Student Legal Assistance as a Volunteer Caseworker. He was responsible for conducting client interviews and intakes for criminal, civil and family law files. Logan also volunteered with Pro Bono Students Canada's Consent Project through which he educated high school students on the meaning and parameters of consent.

Logan's professional experience includes work as a Research Assistant with The Canadian Institute of Resources Law where his research focus included Indian Oil and Gas Regulations, security requirements for mining reclamation, and carbon sequestration and storage regulations.

Outside of law, Logan enjoys a number of outdoor activities, such as hunting, skiing, cycling and hiking.
